

Types of essay with examples-Guide 2022

Writing an essay is an essential task which students are often assigned by their professors. While writing an essay, you might have to expand your ideas on a given topic. Your professor might ask you to express your ideas about a certain topic in the classroom and later he may give you a specific topic to explore further in detail. There are several types of essays in which you need to evaluate, explore and present the extended idea in detail by drawing comparisons with other concepts.

Writing an essay can be easy and challenging at the same time. It is only because it usually requires years of experience to write a good essay that only a professional essay writer has. If you are not familiar with the topic then it can be extremely difficult for you to expand your ideas around a topic and you might struggle while writing it. However, It is a challenge that most students might face once in a while.

If you are one of them then do not hesitate to contact an academic essay writing service. If you are not aware of basic research techniques then they might help you in structuring your essay and you can ask them to provide an EssayWriterForMe. Using these services, you can have your essay written by professionals at affordable pricing. Such services employ hundreds of professional writers having expertise in multiple academic backgrounds that ensure an eloquently written essay.

Returning to our discussion of essays and their types, you should know that each essay follows specific formatting, citation, and a writing style. I remember when I started to write my essay, I was unclear about the topic and I failed to take the proper citation style into consideration too. In the same way, if you intend to write an expository essay, you need to follow an objective and unbiased approach. Unlike persuasive essays, you do not need to focus on convincing your audience.

Instead, simply narrate your arguments in a logical and objective manner. The structure of expository essays is that of a standard essay with an introduction, body paragraphs, and conclusion. Elaborating further on essays, they are not limited to one type. Essays can be divided into six major categories or types. In the following section, we will elaborate on all the essay types in detail. So keep reading to expand your knowledge on the different types of essays, which are as follows.

Types of essays

1. Compare and Contrast Essays

In this specific type of essay, you analyze two or more ideas side by side by analyzing the common intersections, along with evaluating the difference in their perspectives. To draw a comparison and contrast between two topics, one must ensure that they are from the same domain or category. For you can compare the characteristics of fruits with vegetables as you may find many similarities and differences. However, you cannot compare and contrast an apple with a V8 engine.

2. Process Essays

It is the simplest type of essay in which essay writer narrate the guidelines or instructions about a given topic. You can also define the process of making certain products from start to end. In its true sense, this essay is closely related to narrative essay however it exclusively deals with producing things. For example, in such an essay you can elaborate on the process of manufacturing cotton, metal, leather, wires, machinery, and many other products.

3. Cause and Effect Essay

It is an important type of essay in which you need to evaluate the relationship between the cause of an event and its possible effects. In the cause-and-effect essay, a series of continuous evaluations includes analyzing the causes first and then elaborating the potential effects. Cause and Effect essay can be divided into two structuring styles, including block and chain structures.

In the block structure of the cause-and-effect essay, all the possible causes are listed first, followed by a transitory paragraph, after which you evaluate the effects. In chain structuring of cause-and-effect essays, you evaluate the causes and their effects side by side. For example, in the absence of gas (cause), no one can start a car (effect) having a mechanical engine.

4. Definition Essays

In definition essays, you have to describe the given topic or subject in detail while keeping an unbiased and objective tone. Definition essays are also simple where you have to define the subject matter in third-person narration. For example, if you want to write such an essay by online essay writer about a person then make sure to include multiple perspectives about that person's personality.

5. Problem and Solution Essays

In this type of essay, you start with the identification of the problems, followed by proposing the potential solutions to those problems. Your target focus should be one particular subject or idea. You have to develop the idea by relating back to prior work, recommendations, or perspectives provided by other researchers. In a problem and solution essay, you also need to analyze the loopholes left by the previous researchers and work to fill that gap via your research. For example, if you are writing an essay on climate change then you need to highlight the problems or causes first followed by potential solutions.

6. Classification Essays

In classification essays, you divide the target subject matter into different categories and groups. You elaborate on the subdivisions existing within the main topic and how they relate to each other. For example, if you are writing an essay about religion then you need to divide it into categories so that a reader can develop a comprehensive idea about it.

There you go, these are the six basic types of essays which is also followed by online essay writers and we have clearly outlined and defined for you. We hope that you must have developed a basic understanding about how to write different types of essays. Good luck.